

I have registered with the State of Indiana to be placed on their no call list. Since registering, the volume of unwanted/unsolicited/undesirable/nuisance sales calls has decreased from several a week to 1 in six months. If the FCC wants to publish a regulation, then it should be either:

1. at least as tough as the toughest state law or
2. written in such a way that state rules can supercede the Federal rule.

Thank you for providing this forum to express my view.
